

MOMMY, AM I?

About the Book:

At the zoo with his mom, curious little Theo and his sister Lilly notice strange things happening after every animal they pass by.

Theo sees his hands are turning into a lion's paws, then a monkey's arms...

"I'm not an animal, Mommy, am I?"

This lyrical picture book comes to life when the imaginary world and the real world become one. The more animals Theo sees at the zoo, the stronger the comparisons become.

Capturing the wild imagination of a child who doesn't know what is real from what is pretend, is Theo a little boy or really an animal in the end?

Message

MOMMY, AM I?

There is something to love about reading a new story to a child...

The wonderment and awe on their faces that even we as adults strive to experience again through their eyes.

"I love the idea of this story. Using different parts of animals to represent different aspects of Theo really drives home that kids' unique qualities can help guide them through life. Reading it aloud was a joy. Great job with creating such interesting rhymes!

The ending made me tear up a bit (side note: I recently lost my mom) because even as we get older, we will always be our parents' kids." - J.Z.

This book is for kids, but it is also for the parents, aunts, uncles, grandparents, neighbors and even babysitters who love an imaginative, childhood nostalgia-inducing story. I highly encourage you to pick up a copy to brighten your day :)
